MEDIA RELEASE

New KUHN POWER FEED ROLLER on SB series for unrivalled capacity Excellent crop guiding in various crops and swath sizes

As harvest windows get shorter, it gives peace of mind knowing the intake capacity is geared up a notch as KUHN introduces the all-new POWER FEED ROLLER from model year '21 onwards on its SB series large square balers. This driven crop roller actively follows the height of the swath and ensures a continuous and consistent flow of the crop towards the intake roller.

Excellent crop guiding in different crops and swath sizes

Difficult crop conditions or inconsistent swaths could pose a challenge for the intake rotor. With the KUHN POWER FEED ROLLER this belongs in the past. This driven crop roller does not only help to feed in the swath, it actively follows the height of the swath. As it travels upwards and downwards over a 25 cm range, it compresses the crop and adds friction simultaneously. Consequently, swath irregularities are compensated for. As inconsistencies in the swaths are smoothed out, a steady crop flow is delivered to the rotor, increasing the potential throughput of the rotor.

Less power peaks in the intake system

A steady crop intake ensures a reduced power requirement and a smooth running of the machine, as peak loads are avoided. Moreover, wear on the machine is also reduced as less strain is applied on the intake.

With significantly higher throughput, lower power requirement and a reduced risk of blocking or overloading the rotor, customers are delivered a sound solution for their challenging needs, regardless of their baling application.

The benefits of the KUHN POWER FEED ROLLER:

- Unrivalled overall capacity
- Excellent crop guiding in different crops and swath sizes
- Less power peaks in the intake system
- Smooth running of the machine
